Hats Off to Norway

The German high commissioner at Oslo has gone through the motions of de-posing King Haakon, ending the monar-chy, abrogating the parliament, and put-ting Judas Quisling in sole and absolute control of Norwegian affairs, under his august self. august self.

The Norwegians probably won't notice The Norwegians probably won't notice the difference, and can hardly be surprised at the manoeuvre, though they will be an-gered at the effrontery to their King and themselves. Their country has been about as completely dominated and bossed by Hitler's hirelings under the old order as it can be under the new.

it can be under the new.

The real and enduring significance is that not all the pull and all the pressure
the Herr commissioner and his Quisling troop could bring to bear could coax or correct the Norwegian parliament into deposing Haakon and acknowledging feality to Adolf. Its members have kept faith with their people, their pledges and their principles. The spirit of Norway is neither broken nor bent.

Demand Makes the Difference

People in Ontario and Quebec who set People in Ontario and Quebec who set the clocks ahead last spring to "save daylight" are now told they must keep them shead to save power. The energy of the water-falls is needed to drive machines in munition plants and other essential industries. Hence the householder must get up with the sun, so less electric current will be used in lighting homes and shops in the evening. Premier Hepburn was right a year ago when he said the change from peace to war had changed the outlook in Canada's most heavily industrialized area from a power surplus to a power shortage.

Canada's most heavily industrialized area from a power surplus to a power shortage. The new demand that has thus revolutionized the industrial situation in that area has also made its influence feit in the lumber woods of British Columbia, the mining areas of the north, and in lesser degree the country over. It is specialized production, of course, that is immediately called for, but in all that relates to the equipment of fighting forces and the supply of ammunition there is feverish activity, with resultant stimulus to employ. ity, with resultant stimulus to employment and business in ever-widening cir-clse of occupations not directly concerned in war work.

What a busy and better world this would be if, without having to endure the curse of war, we could maintain the demand for goods—any kind of goods—at war-time pitch all the time.

Britain and France

Dakar, the despatches say, is well forti-fied, with a garrison of 6,000 French and colonial troops, and its defences have been strengthened by the squadron of cruisers and destroyers sent there from Toulon a

The Petain cabinet has therefore plenty The Petain cabinet has therefore pienty of force on the spot to clear out the Nazi and Fascist agents who have been sent there to convert the place into a propaganda base from which to undermine French authority and influence in west Africa, and to make it an operating base for submarines and airplanes attacking. British and neutral merchant ships in the

Instead of doing this, the armed forces of the Vichy cabinet were employed not only to prevent De Gaulle from landing— which they were entitled to do—but to make an attack on the British warships.

make an attack on the British warships, which the commanders of these forces were plainly informed had come only to take action in the event of German or Italian interference.

Willingly or under dures, Marshal Petain and his associates have thus far made themselves tools and protectors of the agents sent to Dakar to Gestroy French authority and build up there a Nazi-Fascist base for pirate craft. They have also caused Gibraltar to be bombed repeatedly in revenge for the action of the British ships in returning the fire of the Dakar forts and warships.

ships in returning the fire of the Dakar forts and warships.

Withdrawal of De Gaulle's expedition and the covering British squadron leaves it with Marshal Petain to decide whether this will end the cleah or whether France will join its conquerors in making war upon its late ally. That is, if Marshal Petain has any liberty to make decisions, and is not merely a megaphone for liter Hitler. The British Government has been acrupulously careful to not provoke hostilities with France. It is to be hoped this caution will not turn out to have been in vain.

The Bluff That Failed

The controlled press of Italy and of Spain interpret the new proclamation of the solidarity of the Trinity of Therat. According to Mussolini and Franco, as thus officially reported, the ceremonial publicity so suddenly given to their long-standing conspiracy is a horn-blowing stunt intended to frighten the United States back into the dug-out of isolation. At Rome, Signor Gayda blares out that the United States must not ally itself with

At Rome, Signor Gayda blares out that the United States must not ally itself with Britain nor attempt to use any British bases in the Pacific, such as Singapore. At Madrid his opposite number tootles that the United States must renounce any plans to intervene against the totalitarian states; and further warms "Unde Sam" that he "can't fight halfway or play half-waw without risking everything."

that he 'can't fight halfway or play half-way without risking everything.'

No doubt this sounds very impressive to the gentlemen who are making the noise. But Washington, for some reason, does not show signs of heading for the dog house as told to. On the contrary, official response there is an announcement that more and more aid is to be given to Britain. As to the use of Singapore, the United States fleet will proceed to that base if and when it seems advisable that it should do so, as a matter of course; no official word to that effect is required.

It was quite unnecessary for Rome and Madrid to go to the trouble of explaining what the solemn fare at Berlin was hoped to accomplish. The purpose stands out what he solemin taree at Berin was noped to accomplish. The purpose stands out from the context. The reason for the show is equally plain. Herr Hitler's career of conquest has struck a snag. If the flow of munitions from the United States to of munitions from the United States to Britain is kept up and increased, his war machine will be blasted off the face of the earth. And with it must go the dreams of the other aggressors, in Europe and the Orient. Hence the United States was to be frightened into keeping its munitions at home.

But Washington didn't scare worth a cent. Instead, it said it will send more planes and bombs and ships and tanks and guns to Britain. So the net result of the open proclamation of alliance is that Japan has put itself on the spot as jointly liable for the crimes of Hitler and Mussolini.

aimed at the conquest of Central and South America.

The peril passed because in the end Great Britain defeated Napoleon and was powerful enough, thereafter, to forbid the continental al-eracy, thereafter, to forbid the continental al-ditional continents of the continental al-america. Without the British away vicetory of Trafolagar, the failure of Napoleon to invade Great Britain, and in the end his final downfail at Waterloo, it is difficult to imagine how the small weak republic of the United States could have prevented the European struggle for em-lance of the continent of the continent of the latest provided the formation of the continent of the continent of the continent of the continent of the state of the continent of the continent of the continent of the disolation would not have been a century of toolation.

We shall do well to remember these things now. For though the circumstances are different, the central principle of our policy must be the same. We must see, even more licelity and the same. Fractions In Arithmetic Are Same As In England Guest Children Declare

By F. G. MARTIN

By F. G. MARTIN

"Fractions in arithemtic are the same in Canada as they are in England, but your dollars and cent take a bit of getting used to, after our English money," 13-year-old Ada Old-ham informed a Bulletin reporter during the week-end, in telling of her two months as a British guest child in

CAMP SARCEE, sept. 10—Edmonton's Fusiliers showed the way to other units at Sarcer camp over the week-end, by capturing the platoon cup for efficiency in a competition here in which it units completed.

Loud cheers greeted popular award and both Lieut. Col. II. B. Jamieson, commander of the Fusiliers and Lieut. McLean were warmly congratulated.
